HAYLE PUMP NEWSLETTER

THE GREAT HAYLE MARCH OF 1997

If anyone needed evidence of the resurgence of feeling of the people of Hayle for the well-being and future of their town, it was well and truly provided by the great protest march of 29th May 1997 against the intention to install a BSE cattle incineration complex near Angarrack

The announcement of this appalling project was the final action that caused the people of Hayle to react to the unfairness and indifference of the authorities at county and district level to the injustice and depredation inflicted on the town over the last twenty-plus years.

It was the impression, widely held, that Hayle was looked on as the "dump site" of Cornwall, and as someone said, the town was being regarded and treated as a "Soweto Township" by the surrounding areas of Cornwall

The population of Hayle, had seen over the years, the major industries close and leave the town, and the unemployment that then followed. The generating stations, Associated Octel; the Esso depot; Slades; and, lately, the St Ivel Creamery were all shut down.

At the same time, almost every trace of Hayle's industrial heritage has been destroyed. Even listed buildings have been allowed to be brought down

Now, at last, things are changing. Led by members of Hayle Town and the Hayle members of Penwith District and Cornwall county councils, a strong movement has arisen in defence of Hayle and its future prospects.

So we saw on Thursday, 29th May 1997 the magnificent march of protest against this dreadful scheme, culminating in the impressive mass rally at Hayle Rugby Club where speeches were made opposing the incinerator, by the Town Mayor, Mrs. Shirley Oliver, Councillor Rob Lello, and Andrew George M. P., among others.

In the past Hayle has had imposed on it the disgusting "Clean Sweep" scheme to clear up Mounts Bay and pump the sewage of Penzance and district into St. Ives Bay via the St. Erth works, a project strongly opposed by the people of Hayle and St. Ives.

Over the same period, almost all the green areas in the town of Hayle have been packed tight with high-density housing, some even without front or back gardens.

With the announcement of the intention to build a cattle incinerator, the people of Hayle had simply had enough. Led by their concerned councillors the great march for fairness was under taken.

Three thousand people were united in their cause, and were joined by large numbers of the younger generation. In the past a protest in Hayle usually meant a few older people meeting in the Passmore Edwards Institute and making their points, and then being smoothed over by oily P.R men. The march of 29th. May changed all that.

Truro has been given a "Hall for Cornwall"; Penzance has been selected for a university site; St. Ives was chosen for the "Tate of the West"; and Hayle has been presented with a four-chimney cattle cremator. Need any more be said! Only this: The great march and the mass rally of 29th May 1997 was the people of Hayle saying "Enough is enough"

HAYLE - PORDIC TWINNING

This weekend (11th May) saw the second and final official signing of the Charter for the twinning of Hayle and Pordic (in Brittany). The weekend started with the arrival of the party of 55, this included the Maire and his wife, Councillors, and Committee members, a rugby team and supporters.

They were met at Hayle Rugby Club by the Chairman of Hayle Twinning Association and wife, Committee members, host families and the Chairman of Hayle Rugby Club, Mr David Hughes. 30 stayed at the club house and were looked after very well. Mrs Susan Hurrell arranged food for them and then a bus trip was arranged for the afternoon.

Hayle Town Council held a reception at the Community Hall at Carew House for the Maire of Pordic M. Andre Guede and his party and the hosts were also invited. They were met by the Hayle Mayor and Councillors, a buffet of Cornish fayre was provided, pasties, heavy cake and saffron buns, served with French wine.

Saturday morning was a free period, the afternoon was spent at the rugby club where, after the match, a buffet was supplied for 100 people. The evening was spent in the Penmare Hotel function room, where the final signing took place. The Charter was signed by both Mayors, Mr. Charlie Allen, M. Andre Guede, the Chairman Mr Maurice Trathen and Claude Le Potier. This was witnessed by a sizeable crowd of people. Both Cornish and Breton gifts were exchanged, notably the flags of St Piran and the Bretagne flag. A copy of the Charter done in calligraphy by Mrs Peggy Darlow was also presented, a buffet was then available organised by Mrs

Fay Trathen and Committee members wives, Gill Gregory, Elaine Allen and daughters, Dave and Val at Vals Cafe and Sally at the Cornish Arms.

The whole weekend was a great success. Thanks were given to Hayle Rugby Club and catering staff, Larry and June, and staff at the Penmare Hotel and our sponsors. Thanks also to Samantha who helped out with the programmes etc., and of course the people of Hayle who kindly hosted our French friends. Thanks were also given by the Chairman to the committee and families for their support and hard work. continued...

District Councillor Profile

-- Mandy Hutchens --

I have lived in Hayle for 18 years and was born on St Marys in the Isles of Scilly. I am married to Marshall Hutchens who is Chairman of the Harveys Foundry Steering Group and have twin daughters aged 16 who are about to leave school. This has helped me understand the problems facing todays youngsters who are confronted with high unemployment and low wages. I was elected on to the District Council as a Hayle member in 1995 and since then have become actively involved in several projects around Hayle. As a founder member of the Harveys Foundry Steering Group, I have helped this major project evolve from an idea into the start of consolidation work. I see my future role in the group as being to ensure that Penwith D.C continues to support this initiative along with my fellow Hayle Councillors. I am fully supportive of the ideas to turn the area into a Heritage/Arts "Quarter" for Hayle - something the Town seriously lacks.

I am a Trustee of the Hayle Projects Office and believe that Hayle has unlimited potential for future re-generation and that the Projects Office will be able to assist along with other groups, the general raising of Hayle's profile in the District and the potential development opportunities it creates. As a member of the Gwithian Towans Management Group, I hope to ensure that this fragile system is protected from over-development but at the same time it is used to draw visitors to the area. I support the idea of managed parking places and restricted access for motor vehicles. Recently the Towans have been given "Area of Great Landscape Value" status thus protecting large areas of it.

Broadly speaking, my views are that run down, derelict areas in Hayle should be used for a wide variety of job creating opportunities including traditional crafts and arts and for the teaching of these, rather than housing estates which is the way they are going at present. The beautiful countryside surrounding Hayle is an asset that brings visitors to the Town and must be protected from unsympathetic development "at any cost". I also fully support initiatives to redevelop Hayle Harbour, the old Cinema, create a Drop-in Centre and Skateboard Park for youngsters, the Waste to Energy project and the creation of a Sculpture Walk through

A TALE OF TWO TOWNS

As an introduction to a future series of articles featuring Hayle's rich heritage of historic buildings, listed or otherwise, I would like to set the scene by taking an overall look at Hayle itself.

As the title suggests, Hayle started out as two very separate urban centres, which grew up around its two great foundries, in the mid-eighteenth century, at the start of the Industrial Revolution.

The great rivalry between the Cornish Copper Company and John Harvey and Sons is legendary, and became even deeper and more bitter during their long dispute over the Rights to the water front at Carnsew and Penpol. The plots and counter plots and general skulduggery would have compared well with today's "Soap Operas".

The men from the Copper Company, blocking off Harvey's Access to the quays under cover of darkness would have done justice to "Dallas". It was this long and bitter rivalry which served to create the distinctive identities of Copperhouse and Foundry.

Although the early terraced workers' houses were built in the same typical, vernacular style, both areas show a specific character in their commercial and public buildings which reflects the nature of their separate growth. In Copperhouse for example, most of the shops are built along the main thoroughfare, Fore Street, but at the Foundry end of Hayle, Harvey's Emporium discouraged commercial competition. So the "Front-Garden" shops sprang up later, as its power waned giving the shoppers of Foundry a greater choice of goods, and what was probably more important, lower prices.

The extensive use of Scoris in Copperhouse and granite in Foundry also served to make the difference even stronger. This separate identity between the two ends of town also virtually assured that Hayle would be blessed, or cursed, depending on your point of view, with two of everything.

Besides the foundries, which were manned by workers fiercely loyal to their own particular end of town, both companies had their own Gasworks, Ropewalk, Lime Kilns, Shipyard and Grist Mills.

Copperhouse and Foundry could each boast of a Market Hall, a Bank, Assembly Rooms, a Post Office and a large Methodist Chapel. There was also a Coaching Inn at both ends of the Town, the White Hart in Foundry Square, and the Hayle Hotel, later to be renamed the Penmare, at the entrance to Copperhouse, both built in 1824. Later, it even had two cinemas.

This was competition gone mad! Unfortunately, since the end of the 19th. Century both ends of the town have lost more than they ever gained.

As the foundries and the port declined, so too did the fortunes of Copperhouse and Foundry, and their twin institutions. The Ropewalks, Lime Kilns, Gasworks, Shipyard and Grist Mills were closed down and demolished. The Market Halls were converted into offices and the two mighty Chapels became too costly to keep in good repair. Foundry Chapel, with its Church School was closed and became Pratt's Market. Copperhouse Chapel became derelict and was demolished to make way for a Housing Estate. The cinemas are also gone, although there are now moves afoot to restore the one in Copperhouse.

Differences will always remain between Hayle's two communities, but today's town is much more united now, because Hayle is fighting a very different battle as it moves into the 21st Century. A rather sad example of this appeared in the previous issue of the "Pump" with the announcement that "Foundry Gala Day" is being withdrawn from the Heritage Week's annual programme. As a founder member of the Heritage Committee, I found the concept of the whole of Hayle working together to create an annual event, which is now being recognised and respected outside the town, A very rewarding experience. Please Foundry think again, before destroying everything that has been achieved by a great deal of hard work over the past tree years, by groups and individuals from both ends of the town.

In spite of this, Hayle has always had cause to be justly proud of its history, and the important part it played from the very beginnings of Industry, not only in Great Britain, but throughout the world. Hayle's foundries not only made the machinery, they often invented it too, but parts of Hayle have been around a great deal longer than that. This has left behind a rich legacy of buildings of quite varied architectural styles, some of which have acquired very colourful histories as well.

Georgina Schofield, Hayle Walks Project.

This cartoon was drawn by a friend of Jean McKay's 12 years ago when she left her native

Manchester to move to Cornwall. She spent two years living in Penzance before moving to Hayle, a town which she passionately loves. She runs her own picture framing business from her house in Hayle Terrace, which she shares with her dog and three cats. She believes in framing harmoniously in colours to suit the particular artwork or tapestry, and many of her customers leave the choice of mount and colour of frame to her; which leaves her artistically free to produce the best possible result. She has been painting for 34 years, and was a member of Salford Art Club for over 15 years, during which time she exhibited throughout the North West of England. Since moving to Cornwall she has had one woman exhibitions in restaurants, galleries, at Treloarwarren House and in libraries. For the whole of June she will be showing her work at Hayle Library, including water colours, silk paintings, and oil paintings.

BOOK REVIEW

"Footloose in Hayle" is a new book now in circulation. It is on sale at the Project Office and various shops and outlets in the town of Hayle. It describes and details eight walks in Hayle and surrounding area. Even for those who think they know the area, some surprising facts crop up. For instance, where is Pickle Jar Corner? Did you know Clifton Terrace was named in honour of the Clifton Suspension Bridge? Well you do now!

The routes are suitable for most people, being in short manageable sections. It is full of fascinating historical facts without swamping the reader with too much detail. It includes a lot of nature notes on fauna and flora with good drawings of birds and plants.

It is a wealth of information that residents should know, and I am sure locals will enjoy reading it and realise how great Hayle's Industrial Heritage is. A lot of research has gone into this book and Dave Philp and Georgina Schofield should be congratulated on producing such an interesting book.

THE STORY OF ABHEI-JOES

It all began after a visit to Newquay Trade Show to see my mother, who was exhibiting a vast range of locally made brass and copper-ware.

We were invited to look at the other trade stands and were drawn towards the various New Age and Ethnic stands. On speaking to an exhibitor we learned that New Age & Ethnic gifts were very popular with all age groups. My mother (the proprietor of Abhei-Joes) and my wife decided that a shop in Hayle would be worth a try and after discussing it with my brother and sister-in-law, we all thought it was worth a go, so Hey Presto Abhei-Joes was born.

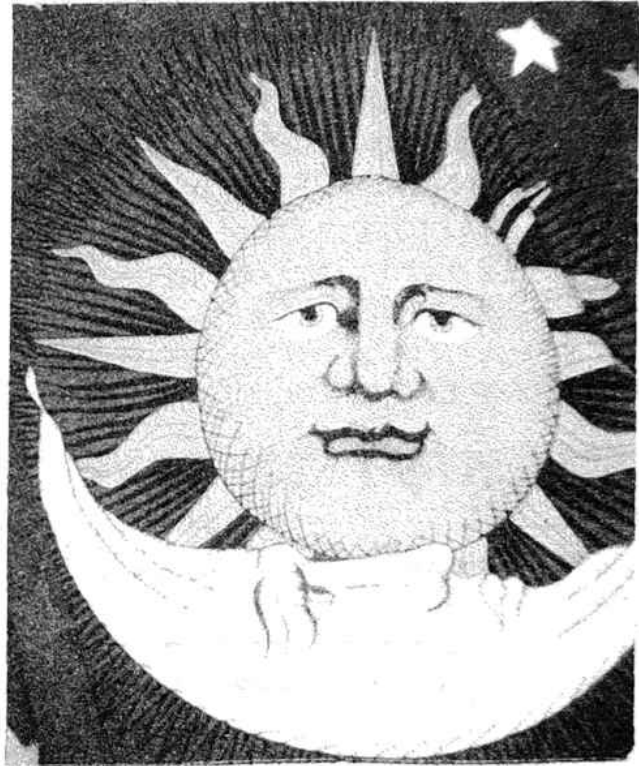

By the way, if you are wondering where the name comes from, my nieces & my daughters are named Abigail, Heidi and Joanna.

The shop opened at Easter and has proved very popular. So from ashcatchers to amber, bags to bongs - come to Abhei-Joes, next to Philp's Pasty Shop on East Quay, opposite the Royal Standard.

We have an extensive range of items, including wooden dolphins and Buddhas, all sorts of separates and fashion accessories, aromatic oils jewellery and African musical instruments.

So from ashcatchers to amber, Bags to Bongs - come to Abhei-

Joes. We are next to Philp's Pasty Shop on East Quay.

We are open 7 days a week during the summer, from 9am.

VOLUNTEER BUREAU.

Monday 21st April marked a milestone in the growth of the Penwith Volunteer Bureau with the opening of a new office in Hayle. It had become increasingly evident that in order to effectively service the Hayle area there was a need for a more local base. The new office is situated in Foundry House, Foundry Square and is open for anyone to drop in each weekday morning between 10a.m. and 12 noon. Appointments are also available at other times by phoning the bureau on 757364. Volunteer co-ordinator Lyn Burtenshaw is available to talk to prospective volunteers, providing information on local volunteering opportunities or to take referrals from groups or individuals who need a little help. The new office is supported by a grant from the Single Regeneration Budget as well as funding from the Dept. of Heritage "Make a Difference" initiative.

In order to support the work of the bureau in the longer term funding is also being sought from the Lottery Fund.

The Bureau is a registered charity which exists to support and develop the vast range of volunteering activity which is going on locally. As well as recruiting volunteers for Community groups and charities working locally, it also aims to identify needs within the community and assist new projects in getting off the ground. Volunteer helpers are needed for all sorts of projects from conservation work through to befriending people who need a little support or friendship.

many groups need people to help with the fund raising, organising events like coffee mornings or help with house to house collections.

Penwith Responds is one project recently set up by the Bureau in Penzance which hopes to extend into the Hayle area. Volunteers are specifically recruited to assist the elderly and house-bound with such tasks as gardening and decorating. However, if the experience in Penzance is repeated in this area demand will be very high and therefore many more volunteers will be needed.

H.A.D.S. CONCERT. "LAST OF THE SUMMER WINE"

Many thanks to Charlie Allen and David, who entertained us for a couple of hours. They gave up their time to help raise some money for H.A.D.S. The few that attended 30 or so enjoyed themselves. A good show was missed by many.

One of the funny moments was at the start, when Ken Townend introduced Charlie and David. Ken said he was going to sit at the back to enjoy the entertainment, but dear ken had forgotten to pull the curtains back, leaving Charlie and David sitting behind closed curtains.

Ken realised his mistake, and made everyone laugh by saying, "You can't get good staff anymore".

Nearly £70 was raised with entrance MONEY and draw tickets etc.

LONDON MARATHON

I started training for the London Marathon in April '96 and in October I applied for a place but didn't get an entry, so I decided not to waste all the training and applied for a Charity place. The Charity I chose was "C.L.I.C.", Cancer Leukaemia in Childhood.

I wrote a letter with a few details of how much I thought I could raise, and just before Christmas I had a reply back to say I had been chosen. From January '97, with the help of Mr Peter Nicholson, I started with my sponsor, forms, friends and family all helped me, between February and April. We also collected outside local stores in the Hayle and Penzance area, we also had a number of collecting tins in pubs and shops.

Just after Christmas I joined Hayle Harriers which helped me cope with my training and I got plenty of friendly advice. On 12th April, 15 of the Hayle Harriers travelled up to London for the weekend, for some of us it was our first Marathon. I ran with 3 others.

The first 10 miles went very quickly, between 16 & 20 miles it was tough, we were all glad we had all put a lot of training in, and after 4hrs. 55mins. I crossed the line to receive my medal.

We had agreed to meet under the

"H" sign and then to walk back to our hotel.

It had been a lot of fun, and we raised a lot of money for different charities. I raised over £2000 in sponsorship and with my other collections my total was £5000.

Thanks to all who made donations

EXHIBITION AT COPPERHOUSE POOL.

Is it serious or just for fun?
The images at Christmas in Newlyn and Mousehole harbours and most shopping streets are recognised and understood for what they are. Mr Ron Haselden's installation is titled "The Diver" and was prompted by a view of the Lands End peninsula from a liner going across the Atlantic. Surrounded as we are here by miles of beaches, the sea with liners, or at least boats going past all the time, why do you think the Diver is diving? What better than to spend a few minutes sitting on a sunny evening and think of the area we live in, its people, and the play of light on water?

Letter

Dear Pump Readers and fellow residents of Hayle

I am writing to declare my strong opposition to the planning proposal to build a temporary animal cremation facility on Unit 20 at Hayle Industrial Estate by WRE Services Ltd. My objections are as follows: -

The purpose of the Industrial Estate is presumably to attract footloose industry to provide long term job prospects for the local population. It has been successful in attracting some companies, which is creditable - but these may relocate elsewhere with the threat of an unpleasant working environment created by unsightly and smelly incinerator operations.

This development will do nothing to improve the job creation efforts in this area, as it is only temporary. Indeed as stated above, Hayle could be worse off for jobs if this development is allowed to proceed.

Hayle is primarily a tourist economy, what will holiday makers think of our town if all they can smell all day is incinerator fumes?

WRE are bound to stress that their operation will be smell free, but recent news items on the television have documented communities who were promised smell free operations and whose lives have been ruined and made miserable as a result of broken promises by the incinerator developers

The area has long suffered from smells from the St Erth Sewage Plant - these have only relatively recently been resolved and we do not need a replacement odour.

This town badly needs quality developments that will enhance our environment to improve our tourist economy and to provide reliable long term employment.

This development will not only not satisfy these criteria, but it could do a lot of harm to our precarious economy as it is.

Your sincerely, Sue Sayer

The Mines of Hayle
No 6 Wheal Emily

Many of you will have noticed that signs warning of Mine Shafts have recently appeared on Gwithian Common and perhaps are wondering where these shafts came from and how long they have been there. The area around Strap Rocks by the Cliff-top Car Park contains several mineral lodes that are exposed in the cliff face. These contain Copper, Lead and Zinc and will have been exploited at an early stage - probably in the early 1800s. These lodes run inland from the cliff and pass under Gwithian Common and head towards Connor Downs. The main Mine to have worked these lodes was called Wheal Emily. The main workings were based around the cliffs between the steps to the beach and Peters point, the main shafts not being far from the Lifeguards Huts. Not a lot is known about Wheal Emily except that it had a 26in Bull pumping engine that was for sale in 1860 after the mine re-opened in 1857. Not a great career !. Engine shaft was sunk to 42 fathoms [252ft] and although had many levels, only produced a recorded £358 worth of ore. There is no accurate record of other shafts although most of these will be shallow and filled-in with sand by now but many can still be made-out with their distinctive cone-like depressions in the Dunes. Many other remains are still to be seen if looked for. There is the rusty remains of a piece of machinery on one of the rocks on the beach and a bricked-up entrance to a level is very obvious behind this leading into the cliff face. Several drainage adits are sometimes exposed in the soft cliff rocks below Peters Point and the path above passes alongside both small pools that served the pumping engine as well as what appear to be partially filled leats that supplied water to these. All around are partially crushed ores - many showing signs of Zinc and Copper. A cave under the car-park shows Iron Pyrites and certainly is man-made. If you look carefully at the cliff-top at one point you will observe two tracks sticking out that would have "dumped" waste rock into the sea - imagine the out-cry if this happened today.

All in all this is a fascinating old mine site to look over next time you are at Gwithian

THE SECOND INSTALMENT OF KENNETH AND HIS CAR

After a hearty breakfast we left Hornsey at 10am on the Sunday morning. It was agreed that I follow the pantehnicon out of London and eventually as far as Exeter. Our exit from the City was uneventful, being the Sabbath Day there was practically no traffic and only a sprinkling of people on the streets. For the month of December, the weather was quite mild and the miles rolled by as we kept up a steady speed.

As the car sped on and I had no passenger to chat to, I passed some of the time singing Advent Hymns this being the first Sunday in Advent, December 1st, 1935. The only hymn which seemed appropriate was "Hark the Glad Sound" as I listened to the little engine chugging away. The hymn, "Lo, He comes with clouds descending", only fitted in when some clouds appeared and there was some rain. Incidentally the Church Register at Carbis Bay where I was the organist, contained the following remark on this day - "Terrific rain." Another Advent hymn, "On Barclays' Bank the Baptist's cry" was not altogether suitable although I liked the tune, "Winchester New".

We stopped only once for a light snack and by 6.30pm we reached Exeter by which time it was dark and we pulled up by a transport cafe where we had a substantial meal. This is where we parted, he to Plymouth on the A38 and I took the A30 to Cornwall, via Okehampton, Launceston and Bodmin. Having never travelled this route before, I soon ran into difficulty. I could not read the signposts and when I slowed down, the speed of the generator dropped and with a weak battery, so did the lights. I was forced to shimmy up ~~the~~ signpost to make sure I was on the right road.

Eventually I reached Bodmin, and this is where my troubles began. On the western outskirts I mistakenly took the road to Bugle instead of keeping on the A30. After travelling a few miles I decided to return to the spot where I made my mistake. This necessitated a three-point turn and in the act of reversing, my rear wheels dropped down into a deep ditch and the car was resting on its chassis with the rear wheels spinning merrily.

I got out onto the road, set the hand throttle slightly above ticking-over position, left the gear lever in first position, wound down the window on the driver's side and turned the front wheels slightly to the right. Now came the crucial moment.

I gripped hold of the right rear wing with one hand and the steering wheel with the other and with one strong tug the spinning rear wheels jumped up over the edge of the ditch and the car was propelled forward, towards the hedge on the opposite side of the road.

With the dexterity of a 25 year old, I hastily turned the steering wheel to the right and at the same time opened the car door and leapt into the driver's seat. All this was done without stalling the engine. I soon reached the A30, down and through Lanivet, on past the Radio Beam Station, under the iron railway bridge which crosses the A30, it was then that I sensed that something was wrong. I soon realised that I had a flat tyre. The right front had let me down. I had no torch but I rummaged around in the boot, lifted out the spare wheel the tyre of which had some air in, I found the wheel brace but no jack. I didn't fancy curling up on the seat until morning, it was then past midnight. Just as I was pondering in my mind my next move, except that I couldn't move, I saw lights in the distance. Sure enough, there was a car approaching. It was pitch dark but I managed to flag it down without being run over. The car contained four uniformed bandsmen, less instruments, who were returning from an evening concert and perhaps a visit to the pub, although it was long after pub hours.

THOUGHTS

Life is full of happenings
 That pile up in the past
 But of those incidents
 It's the nicest things that last Though hurts may stab, and the failures bring dismay
 Still in the realms of memory
 It's the nicest things that stay.

HAYLE MODEL RAILWAY CLUB

The Hayle Model Railway Club was founded by Paul Butler following an advertisement in the Cornishman, and after 2 years now has 12 adult and 4 junior members, and there is a working committee which meets once a fortnight. There are 2 female members, one of whom is the Club Secretary. The Club would welcome any railway enthusiasts male or female, to come and learn new skills -- carpentry or modelling, painting the scenery, wiring, running trains - all good fun. The Club meets at Pratts Market on the first floor on the left where at present there is a layout under construction, which can be seen in operation on Wednesday evenings with steam outline, and on Friday evenings for running diesels. The Club also meets on Monday evenings for construction only. Times of meetings are 7p.m. to 10p.m. and anyone interested to see what the Club is engaged on, will be heartily welcomed.

There is also a junior section in a room on the other side of the gallery, and parents are welcome to bring their children along.

During HAYLE HERITAGE WEEK the Club will hold its second model railway exhibition on 23rd August which this year will be held in the Philip Smith Annex at the Day Care Centre.

The Club is grateful for the financial support given by Hayle Town Council.

So now you know all about us, come along and see for yourself.

Who's the jerk in the big red car?
Plays loud music wherever you are,

A MODERN NURSERY
RHYME

The following nursery rhyme was sent in by a lady aged 82, who wishes to remain anonymous.
The Queen, who'd jogged at least 3 miles,
Was eating bread and honey.
The Duke was surfing the internet,
Looking for something funny.
The maid was in the garden,
Hanging the duvet from the bed,
When down came the acid rain,
And I daren't tell you what she said!

PASSING BY

Many people pass my flat,
some are thin, some are fat.
Where they come from and where they go.
I don't suppose I'll ever know.
I toffer up my narrow hall,
And wish one of them
would call.
I don't care if they are thin or fat,
I only want a little chat!

MORE TALES FROM THE "TRIO"

My elder sister, with the restlessness of one in the late 'teens, took to going off on long solitary rambles without saying where she was bound and evidently not wanting sibling company. Now and then, it seems, there were casual encounters with boys, but nothing at all serious, for those were not the days of permissiveness. Probably she merely wished to assert a limited independence. One day in late summer 1931 she re-appeared from one such absence accompanied by a dog named Rex for which it seemed she had paid twelve shillings and sixpence (63p) at one of the farms near Trencom. Rex was a two-year-old mongrel resembling a foxhound, but smaller. Our parents were furious. We were to return to Buckinghamshire in a few days time and the old car was already likely to be much overloaded, My sister was told that she was to return the dog from whence he came, whether or not she could redeem the 12/6d. Having ever a will of her own, she did nothing of the kind and for the last few days of the holiday we played with Rex on the beach. The dog was a keen ratter, but gullible. One had only to make a hole in the sand with a finger than Rex would snort into it, imagine he smelled a rat and commence frantic digging, only stopping when tired. When the day of departure came, my sister sat in the car in triumph with Rex on her knees. When several years later she married, Rex did not go with her, but he remained a cherished pet until he died of old age in January 1944.

When Regatta Day came, my father was occasionally known to take part in one or two events. He was a powerful swimmer and a competent oarsman, but my memory is vague as to which of the events he favoured. It may be that not being residents, only visitors, not everything was open to him. We watched the Regatta from the motor boat, which was taken into the pool at the last opportunity before the gates were closed on the high spring tide. Usually it was moored at the western end of the pool near the swing-bridge. From here we had a good view of many events, but anything happening at the Black Road end rather strained the eyesight. The Carnival usually took place in the evening of the same day, a pageant to which I looked forward with a fair deal of excitement; the more so as one or two of our friends took part in it. Our usual position to see the Carnival was Gas Works corner, opposite the Standard. To be sure of a good view, we were often early, and this coupled with the fact that the Carnival was not always quite punctual in starting, made the waiting seem interminable. Traffic was light enough then for the Carnival to cause no serious disruption, Amongst those who also owned houseboats in the estuary was Mr. Arthur Kevern, whom we frequently met on the beach, sometimes accompanied by Mrs Kevern. They had a butchers shop in Copperhouse, since used as a cake shop and a cycle shop. I believe the bend in the road beside the shop is still referred to as "Kevern's Corner". I well remember Mr Kevern's powerful physique and that he always wore plus fours. His two houseboats were named "Ferry Queen" and "Jubilee Queen" - the latter in honour of King George V's Silver Jubilee in 1935. They were later conversions than the "Trio" and more seaworthy. For a time at least, they were moored further out and were afloat at high water.

As mentioned in the former article, Thomas W. Ward, the shipbreakers, leased the western part of Hayle Harbour, near Carnsew. On this quay was a large building which housed innumerable fittings and furniture taken from the ships broken up. I was fascinated by this collection and jumped at a chance of visiting it with my father when he was in quest of some particular item.

Nearly everything seemed to be of high quality, but not being readily disposable as scrap metal, the breakers were probably not very interested in it and it was "going for a song". I was much surprised at seeing one or two pianos in the motley collection. The "Trio" derived no little benefit from this source and amongst the things bought from Ward's warehouse were some useful lockers which came, I believe, from a naval ship, H.M.S. Bristol, which had been broken up at Hayle in the early 1920s. My father was an advocate of the maxim "a place for everything and everything in its place". Each locker bore a little brass plate on its door and he laboriously ground off the original inscription, substituting the names of various grocery products, soap, candles, clothing etc.

Concerning H.M.S. Bristol, I remember being told the tale of a sensational event concerning her. I must say to begin with that I was not a witness of this event and knew of it only by hearsay. I believe it took place before I was born and perhaps it lost nothing in the telling. "When this ship was being towed into Hayle to be broken up, someone in authority must have been guilty of a serious oversight. Her tall masts were still in place as she advanced very slowly, under tugs, on the last few yards she would ever travel. Too late to prevent a catastrophe, it was realised that the mast tops would not clear the cables which then spanned the estuary. Alarm spread rapidly and the spectators fled from the vicinity of the pylons. There was a great flash as the cables were severed, and on the Hayle side of the estuary, the sand was blackened where their ends fell. Probably somebody had to answer for this lack of foresight. Whether this event was over dramatised in the telling I have no means of knowing.

In September 1939 these red shutters went up once more. It was one of life's little mercies that I did not know at the time that they would not come down again.

Volunteers Spring Clean Hayle Beach.

40 adults and children gave their support to Hayle's project for National Spring clean Week on Sunday 20th April by helping to move the rubbish from the beach.

In a two pronged attack they scoured the sand at Gwithian and below the Black Cliffs filling over 50 black bags with the litter which they found there.

Also found, were a number of more dangerous objects. Five used syringes and some broken glass were dealt with in a special box supplied by the West Cornwall Health Care Trust.

Following the very successful event last year when approximately three thousand people attended the above market in the marquee on Hayle recreation ground, it has been decided by popular demand to hold the event for two days on the 1st. & 2nd August 1996. An additional feature on the field this year on both days will be "The Cornish Dream" 54 Keyless Concert Organ.

Bookings are now being taken on 01736 754326.

We would like to thank the residents of Hayle and visitors who supported the event last year and look forward to seeing you all again in '96.

Initiative and leadership is encouraged, which would be useful should anyone wish to join the RAF or any of the other armed services. Both qualities will always be an asset even in civilian life.

There are varied weekend activities, running from Friday evening to Sunday lunch time, sleeping in the hall, helping with the cooking and practising all the skills that they have Various organisations are invited to the hall to give demonstrations and to explain different equipment that they use. This includes the Fire Brigade, Police which have been booked for a drugs awareness talk, with dog handlers and the St. John's Ambulance, commencing the beginning of February the latter will be giving First Aid instruction over the next few weeks, many more similar organisations call in to instruct and to inform all through the year.

HAYLE YOUTH JAZZ ORCHESTRA

The idea of forming a Youth Jazz Orchestra for the town came from Malcolm Hinchcliffe and Mrs. Jo McCarthy. Malcolm teaches Brass at Penpol School and Jo is the Class 6 teacher.

At the moment, approximately 12 members meet every Tuesday evening at 7.00pm. in Carew House but it is hoped to eventually have a full complement of 15. Malcolm is looking for young people who play the trombone, sax and bass and they are desperate for a drum kit, they have a drum player but unfortunately no kit.

The enthusiasm should be encouraged and what a great asset to Hayle this orchestra could be. The Mayor has already approach the group to play at one function, but unfortunately they had to turn down the offer as they have only been practising for a relatively short time.

Both Malcolm and Jo stressed that they really need sponsorship from individuals and businesses. A full set of music for 15 costs approximately £56.00 and they are also in need of music stands, preferable wooden ones.

This initiative should be encouraged by us all and along with our band and choirs, we would have an orchestra to be proud of.

If anyone reading this has a drum kit, music stands or is willing to sponsor, Malcolm and Jo can be contacted at Penpol School, or if you are interested in joining and are proficient in playing one of the above mentioned instruments, please pop along to Carew House, Queensway, on a Tuesday evening.

THE MINES OF HAYLE

No. 2 - Boiling Well Mine.

In this, the second article on the Mines of Hayle, I will look at a mine that used to exist on the Hayle Towans. Few people will realise it was there and the site it stood on has been used for several very different uses indeed.

Behind what used to be Triplets Car Sales at Upton Towans, stands a lone brick chimney. It was used during the time when there was a dynamite works there, but it is not known if it was used by the mine. The earliest recorded period of working was before 1815, but by this date the mine was closed. In 1819 it was reopened and two lead lodes discovered. It did not stay open long however, and was abandoned in 1821. In 1853 it opened yet again with the help of a 60 in. pumping engine built at Harvey's Foundry. At this time the mine was 240 ft. deep and was producing lead and silver ore. When it closed again in 1862, the mine had produced 3906 tons of copper ore, 410 tons of lead ore and 5000 ounces of silver! (It is perhaps not realised just how much silver was produced lo-

The mine at this time was 360 ft. deep and had five known shafts and an adit (drainage tunnel) that can still be seen emptying onto the beach.

Today the site is mainly covered with the remains of the Dynamite Works that occupied the site earlier this century. There is however, a large concrete lined shaft that was used to supply water to this enterprise and has recently been secured with steel plates and a padlock. This was probably the main pumping shaft and would have had an engine house next to it. The hard tracks that lead from the mine over the Towans are formed from the waste or 'attle' from the mine and contain some very interesting rock specimens.

Although not a large mine, it had an interesting name, but no-one knows how it got it. The mine was once called North Wheal Alfred, but was rapidly changed when it was realised that Alfred proper was over two miles to the south. The great local historian A. K. Hamilton-Jenkin related how the mine had a poor name for paying it's workers - on Boiling

Well' pay day being synonymous with 'never'!

It is difficult to imagine today, as one walks on the Towns, all the activity and the levels beneath one's feet and 'all that silver still there!

A HAPPY EVENT JUNGLE HERBERT'S

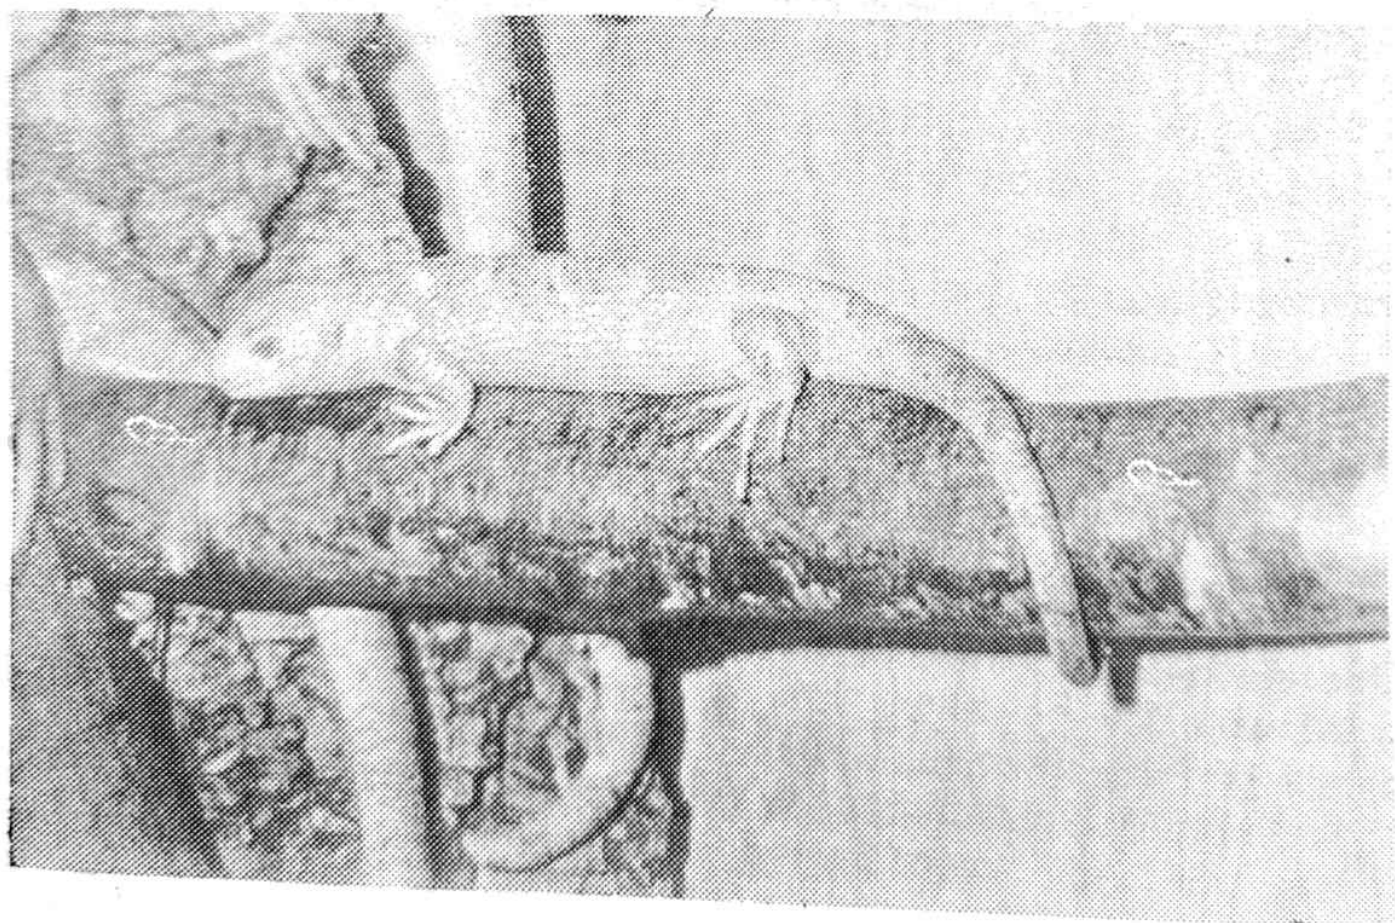

A Monkey Tailed Skink (to you and me, a lizard), was born just four weeks before Christmas. It originates in the Solomon Islands, which is near Papua New Guinea, it is an endangered species now, because all the trees are being cut down for the hard wood, and could be extinct in a very short time, that is why Jungle Herbert's are trying to breed them. Although some have been born in captivity before, this is the first one to have survived. The photograph shows him/her (I forgot to ask) at four or five weeks old.

When the babies are born, they are about one-third to half the size of the mother, they are born alive like a mammal and they are nurtured by the female for the first few weeks.

Skinks are vegetarian and feed mainly on fruit and lettuce etc.

We will try to keep everyone informed on the baby's progress.

We, as a club, did for a couple of years belong to the Cornwall Photographic Alliance. This long established body combines the interests of most of the Camera Clubs in the County. They organise a very worthwhile annual competition for all these clubs, one against the other. Judged by a panel of noteworthy judges at Bath usually, this type of competition does much to improve the understanding and improvement of many peoples work.

Competition at this level, despite the fact that our club did quite well at it's first attempt, is not something we aspire to. We do aim to improve our work but such an intense focus on competing plus the fact that at that time we could not offer the sort of support the committee should reasonably expect from each affiliated club, prompted us to stand down from membership of this body.

Our relations with other clubs is good, we enjoy the valued comments of their members when invited to be our guest speaker, judge, or to present a "workshop". Several of our present members also belong to other clubs in the area. Clubs all differ to some degree and we are flattered that ours holds something which appeals to these who belong to one or more other camera club.

There are no restrictions on where a member lives. One of our members is serving in HM forces, another resides in Exeter. Prints or slides can be easily posted, in fact, we were, for a time "Twinned" with a camera Club in Blackwood Australia. They are now disbanded but at the time we exchanged boxes of slides and a video or two. This long ranging contact brought another dimension to club life and experience.

Closer to home we support, where possible, local events. The Hayle Heritage Festival has its own photographic competition which we organise for the HHF committee. The local Public Library has held our own photographic exhibition for many years now. Hopefully enjoyed by those who see it.

An exhibition of prints taken to support a charity was an extra this year 1995 plus a display of photos old and new of local places as in the 50's to late 60's to today.

Equipment. For anyone considering a visit to our club, the type and value of your camera has little bearing on things. How often have I heard; "I could never afford the equipment needed to join a camera club". Bunkum, a light tight box with a shutter mechanism and a lens is all that's required. We would delight in seeing some Pin-hole work (A shoe box with a small hole in one end and film) its only that its far more difficult than buying today's cheap compacts or a throw-away cardboard camera - don't knock them!

Staying with this theme, a news photographer for Picture Post proved the point many years ago by taking a picture of two girls sitting on the prom railings at Blackpool I think, skirts lifted by the wind. A print reproduced over and over again, published every year I expect and still "alive". Taken - to prove a point - on a Box Brownly!

Anyone thinking of buying a camera would do well to visit a camera club at least once to seek advice. Get "hands-on" experience before you decide what to go for. Take advice, see exactly what you will need for the photos you expect to be taking. How often we see someone invest in a perfectly good camera only to find it lacks the versatility required.

Some of our members only ever use a flpoint~and~5hoot~~ "Compact". They get just as much enjoyment from the hobby, taken at their own pace, as do those with a top of the range camera costing many hundreds of pounds per outfit. Winners each month come from each and every group. In other words the photographer comes before his or her equipment every time.

Photography is about seeing the picture, capturing it can be done with the most expensive camera available or the cheapest. The person holding the camera is the prime factor. If you cannot use your eye to advantage the camera becomes just another piece of jewellery.

Understanding photography can bring great rewards. Someone using a completely manual camera. Setting the aperture, focus, speed for the composition to be shot. Getting the prints back and showing an esteemed judge who says flattering things about it. Being able to say "I did that" is pleasure shared.

ART - IN THE BIKE SHED!

Whilst I suspect that most of us - of the older generation, think we know what goes on behind the bike sheds of our children's schools, how many know what is on offer inside the bike shed of Hayle Community School?

Having an inquisitive mind, I decided to pay a visit to said venue. Arriving at the school I made my way to the visitors reception desk. Before I could pose the question, "where is your bike shed?" a figure not unknown to me appeared. It was Head Teacher, Mr Oliver, and after a polite verbal exchange, he got a young lad to escort me to my intended destination - the bike sheds.

Needless to say, I would never have identified same myself as the building looked as much like a bike shed as the Albert Hall to a branch of Tesco's. Brightly lit, pleasantly laid out, my first impression was Bravo!

As I entered I espied, tucked away in a corner two real live artists, two young girl pupils making a good job of a still life (potted plants), one in paint, one in pencil. A couple of visitors beside myself were admiring the numerous exhibits.

I love communicating, talking or writing, for the more we get to know one another the better for all especially in order to bridge a generation gap.

I'm always aware of the talents of youngsters. It is a great pity that adults are generally not prepared to encourage and acclaim these skills, a trait peculiar to the British per se.

I can only suggest you get along to this mini art venue and evaluate the drawings, paintings and pieces of sculpture etc. that indicate clearly that we have talent in this county/country. It just needs

LETTER

Dear Editor,

I read with much interest the letter from Mr. Buchanan on the state that North Quay is in.

I had a pleasant walk over the Towans and then I came across an over-sized junk yard to say the least. Can't the people who have the scrap yard be made to clean it up, and more to the point, however did they manage to get planning permission in the first place? I am sure this state of affairs wouldn't be allowed to happen in St. Ives or Penzance or any other sea-side town.

To say I am disgusted and saddened at the state that the whole of North Quay is in is an understatement, but then no one seems to care what happens in Hayle and there, I think, is your answer.

DAYS OF DYNAMITE

Although Hayle became famous in the last century for its foundries and feats of engineering, there was another business established, which, for a time, became the town's main employer.

Situated on a large area of Upton Towans "The National Explosives Company" began producing dynamite in December 1889. The explosive was used for mining and by the end of 1890 they were making 3 tons of dynamite a day.

The Towans site (still known locally as "Dynamite") was chosen because, for safety reasons, the various production areas were kept some distance from each other, so plenty of space was needed. It was also a safe distance from the town. A large supply of water was also needed and this was provided by the abandoned Boiling Well copper and lead mine nearby.

Nitro-glycerine is used in the making of dynamite. This is very unstable and has to be handled with great care. A lot of work was done manually and the nitro-glycerine was transported around in rubber buckets. Despite safety precautions there were accidents. In 1894 two men were killed and in 1899 a boy died in an explosion that was heard in Penzance.

The glycerine-nitrating vat was sited upon the highest sand hill. It became known as "Jack Straw's Hill"-named after a rebellious priest in the Peasants Revolt of 1381!

As well as dynamite the company began to produce blasting gelatine, gelignite and cordite. The cordite was manufactured after winning two large contracts for it from the Government.

Tragedy struck on the 5th of January 1904 when 4,200 lbs. of nitro-glycerine exploded killing four men. The blast caused damage across the bay in St. Ives and was reputedly heard as far away as Devon.

Manufacturing of blasting explosives reached a peak round about 1907 with up to 2000 tons a year being made. It was being sold to mining companies in Britain and abroad.

With the out-break of World War One production of cordite was increased. 1800 men and women were employed and to tighten security a detachment of soldiers patrolled the Towans. Four more workers, two of whom were girls, were killed in accidents during these hectic war years.

Raw materials for the factory were now brought in by rail. A track was laid from the Great Western line in Hayle. By 1916 war-time production had reached its maximum.

When the war ended in 1918 all cordite production stopped. Unable to compete in the commercial market after the war effort the company had to lay off its workforce. In 1919 it went into voluntary liquidation and in 1920 "The National Explosives Company" finally closed. The buildings were demolished and the machinery dismantled.

Today the ruins can still be seen dotted around Upton Towans - the last of "Dynamite".

MAKE 1996 NOT JUST A PROSPEROUS NEW YEAR,
BUT A HEALTHY ONE.

We know the saying, "Early to bed early to rise makes a man healthy wealthy and wise." ~~But there is a lot of truth in what~~ is said, especially these days, when it costs more than an arm and a leg, (sorry about that), to be taken into care when illness strikes, and it usually strikes at inconvenient times.

The sort of illness I am thinking of are things we can avoid to a certain extent: such as osteoporosis (brittle bone disease), certain heart complaints and high blood pressure, these are just a few, I am sure you can think of many others.

For fit people, exercise helps keep the body properly tuned and the mind alert. For the middle aged, it assists bodily functions, helps strengthen muscles that may have weakened and also strengthens the bone structure, one of the most important factors that assist in the avoidance of osteoporosis (as mentioned above). Loading stress on the skeleton strengthens the bones, whereas lack of exercise reduces bone density thereby weakening them which can cause fractures in later life.

Regular exercise increases strength, endurance and quite important to the older person - flexibility.

Exercise can help to strengthen the heart muscles and help to prevent strokes by improving the blood circulation.

Many people who have complained of tiredness or fatigue have been amazed at the rejuvenation they have felt after a few session of exercise. Twenty minutes three time a week may make all the difference to your life.

Try it, But please check with your doctor if you are in any doubt. It does not have to be vigorous, you will not be entering for the Olympics, but generally speaking, gentle exercise will do you good.

Who knows, you may feel you want something more strenuous!

There is no reason for you to pay out a lot of money for equipment so often advertised i.e.. exercise bikes etc. you have all the facilities in the town. Just look at the advert, opposite. You have all the the facilities necessary, give it a try, nothing ventured nothing gained.

STORY TIME AT THE LIBRARY
MEET FATHER CHRISTMAS

Once again it was full house of children and their parents.

Sally Tonge with the help of Val had the task of getting all the children and parents to join the singing.

Sally also sang some stories with everyone joining in.

All children who entered the competition early in the month would know if they had won a prize or not.

MY young friend Samuel who was there with his little sister, was over the moon when he saw his picture on the wall in the library.

Father Christmas came in with snow on his boots and ringing his bell.

In his sack were the three prize winners. Also a small present for the rest of the children and their mums.

Val thought that Father Christmas should have a present, with which all agreed.

Father Christmas stayed for a while, but not as long as he would have liked. For at Christmas he is very busy.

So off he went a very Happy Father Christmas with his present, but he very nearly went without his bell, but young Sarah had noticed he had left it behind and went running after him.

A few more carols from Sally and Val, then it was tidy-up time with the help of a few of the children, mums and myself.

An end to a wonderful hour. Many, many thanks to Sally, Val and Father Christmas for so much enjoyment.

THE HARBOUR

According to the preliminary development overview, the new owner of the harbour, Mr Carruthers, intends to address five key issues:

1. To improve the appearance of Hayle with social, economic and environmental benefit.
2. To revitalise the economy, attract investment and create permanent jobs.
3. To create a regional and national identity.
4. Formulation of an integrated, cohesive waterfront.
5. Critical phasing to ensure positive impact and immediate benefit.

The development will feature an accessible layout, including a network of attractive pathways, tracks, cycle tracks and water taxis.

The Harbour & Estuary

The proposals include a barrage and lock gates to manage tides and floods and provide an attractive, working permanent harbour. Total refurbishment of Quay and Spit walls and re-establish sluices.

North & East quays might feature land facilities for the fishing industry, with leisure moorings along East Quay.

Small industrial units on North Quay for marine enterprises, ensuring a living port. New road access may be needed to North Quay.

Copperhouse Pool may need to be dredged to remove pollution and maintain usable water depth. Further development proposals for the area will be examined.

Lelant Water and Carnsew Reservoir will remain protected, but sluicing will have to be examined, as well as ideas about partial infill of Carnsew and residential development south of the Spit.

East Quay: Perhaps a Maritime Museum and craft workshops, etc.

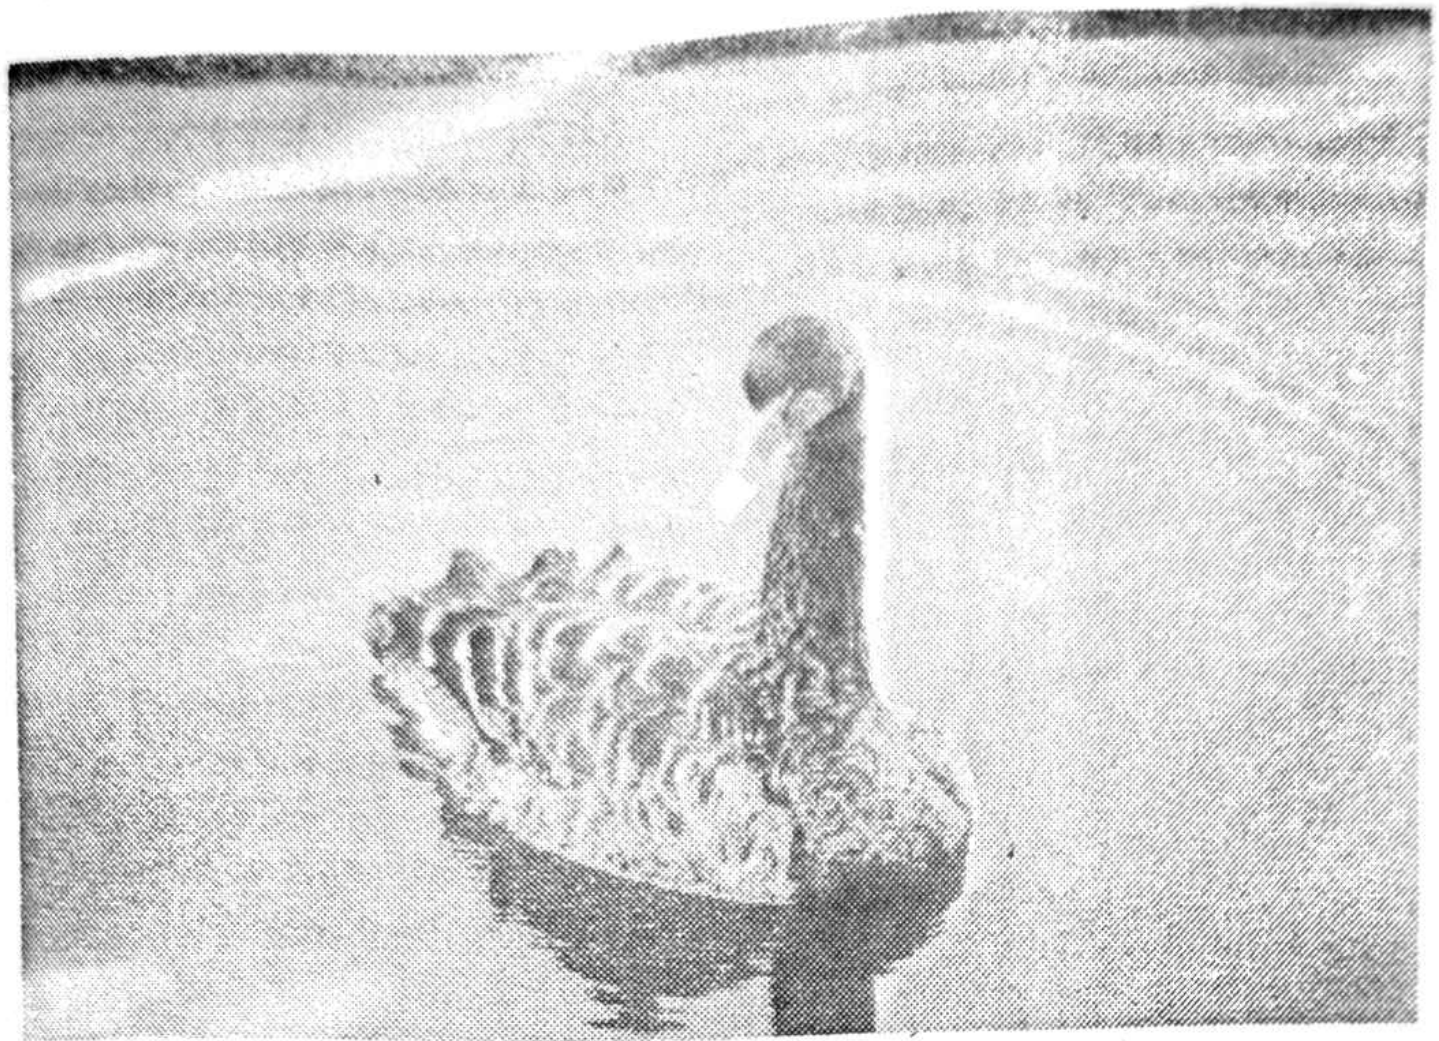

South Quay: Perhaps a hotel and leisure complex, including a cinema, etc.

Foundry: A Commercial development, perhaps with fast food franchise.

Housing: There will be less housing than previously proposed, with upgrading of dilapidated Towans chalets, and quality housing at Lelant.

Riviere Farm: A single leisure based development, operating throughout the year, a destination compatible with Lands End.

We hope to bring you a much fuller account in our next issue. Perhaps this time, with a bit of constructive help from all of us, we can finally make things happen.

WATCH THE BIRDIES !

Our feathered friends have once again found Hayle an irresistible place to stop while the winter takes hold. As promised in the last issue, the last few months have brought in birds like Grebes, Divers and Plovers, but as always there are some very rare visitors for a lucky few to see as well.

One of the most graceful of the rarities was an Avocet which seems to have strayed from its usual wintering place in Devon. The long up-turned bill and black and white plumage makes it easy to recognise, though it is a little shy in giving bird-watches a good close view. At the time of writing it was still present on the Estuary, generally preferring the Lelant side. This is the bird which is used as the symbol of the RSPB.

Shortly after writing my last report a fantastic rarity was seen by a lucky few, but it needed an expert eye to distinguish it from it's relatives. It was an adult American Golden Plover sighted around the Estuary area. This bird is practically identical to our resident winter visitors the European Golden Plover, and with flocks of them around it really was like looking for a needle in a haystack!

Visiting birds from the USA continued to grab the limelight as another very rare one was spotted by a keen eye, it drove the twitchers quackers! It was the Blue-Winged Teal duck from North America. Unfortunately I have not been able to track it down to determine the sex, the drake is unmistakable with its dark blue face which also has a striking white stripe, the head and neck is black. The female is brown, like all Teals but has a blue forewing, the male also has this.

On now to other visitors which have been known to appear over previous years but are certainly still good to see. Carnsew Pool has again brought many interesting sights. As predicted the largest of the Divers has appeared -the Great Northern. Note how it stays under water and what it brings up to the surface to eat- it often turns out to be a crab or starfish! Various diving ducks have come in too. Small flocks of Goldeneye, both male and female, should still be present, the male being very striking with its black and white plumage featuring prominent white stripes on its side and a white face patch. Both types of Sawbill Ducks (named after their long red saw-tooth bills) have appeared, the Red-breasted Merganser and the Goosander. The females are similar but the Goosander has a reddish-brown face, the Merganser's is darker brown. The male Goosander has a black face, head and back with white sides, the Merganser has speckled brown markings on neck and chest with grey, black and white sides. A Long-Tailed Duck has also been reported, though not seen by many, it is the male that has the long tail. Other species of visiting duck include:- small flocks of male and female Pochard and small flocks of Shoveler on the Estuary. These have a distinctive long, broad "shovel like" bill. They are mostly females which are brown but a couple of males showed as well, being more colourful- greenish-black heads, large brown patch on sides and white chest.

Many Little Grebes gather on Carnsew Pool but in amongst them have appeared Red-necked Grebe and Slavonian Grebe, both of which are bigger. The Red-neck having a grey and yellow bill while the Slavonian has a whiter neck, and a dark bill. This is, of course, their winter plumage- its a shame we don't see them in summer! A flock of seven Brent Geese have been visiting many sites throughout Hayle, often spotted flying in formation and Pink-footed Geese have been seen in small numbers on the Estuary. A solitary but very welcome Coot was briefly seen at Carnsew, surprisingly not seen in Hayle for some time. If you were very lucky or skilled enough you may have spotted a Mediterranean Gull amongst hundreds of the more usual types on the Estuary- they look very similar to Black-headed Gulls.

The Snipe, a member of the Sandpiper family of birds, was spotted opposite the Estuary, near the B.P. garage. This bird likes to keep under cover so it was a rare chance to see it- they become more active at night. A female Common Scoter (not that they are in these parts) was seen on Carnsew Pool for a short period. Among other birds seen were both Bar-tailed and Black-tailed Godwits, Greenshank, Turnstones and various Plovers. Last, but not least, there's an odd one out amongst the flock of Mute Swans on Copperhouse Pool at the moment. A beautiful Black Swan, native of Australia, has joined them, this one has most likely escaped or been released from a private collection.

It looks like being a good winter for visiting birds and could get even better as the last part of it draws on. Recognising and finding birds is often difficult so I hope the main recognition markings I have described for most birds listed and their locations will be of some help. It's good to carry a pocket guide book with you, make sure it shows the difference between male and female, also showing how they look in flight. Keep your eyes peeled as often as you can, you never know what you might see next!

THE OLD AND THE NEW

The Old

The Trencrom Revellers Theatre Club

Through 50 years of highs and lows the Trencrom Revellers Group still goes on. Formed in 1946 to raise "welcome home" funds for the returning service men and women it has provided countless pleasure to young and old for fifty years.

In 1960 the society built and opened its own theatre club on Trecrom which became affectionately known as "The Hut Theatre" in 1979 with raked seating, kitchen, dressing rooms and toilets increasing the seating to 180.

Their annual shows consisted of a Pantomime at Christmas, a Spring show, and a 10 week Summer season, alternating two plays, usually comedies.

Sadly in 1981 The Hut Theatre was destroyed by a terrific fire which also included the scenery, costumes and many other items.

Due to under-insurance there was no way to rebuild and the Society have since staged their productions at the Guildhall, St. Ives, St. Johns Hall, Penzance and also Summer shows at the Rugby Club, St. Ives.

Over the years the Society has put on over 800 performances to the delight of all who have watched.

The Revellers look forward to many more years of entertaining their many followers, and are already rehearsing their Summer show 1996 at the Rugby Club, St. Ives, and making plans for their Pantomime for 1997.

The Front of House manager is John Hart and the scenery, lighting and props are being painted and provided by members of the Society.

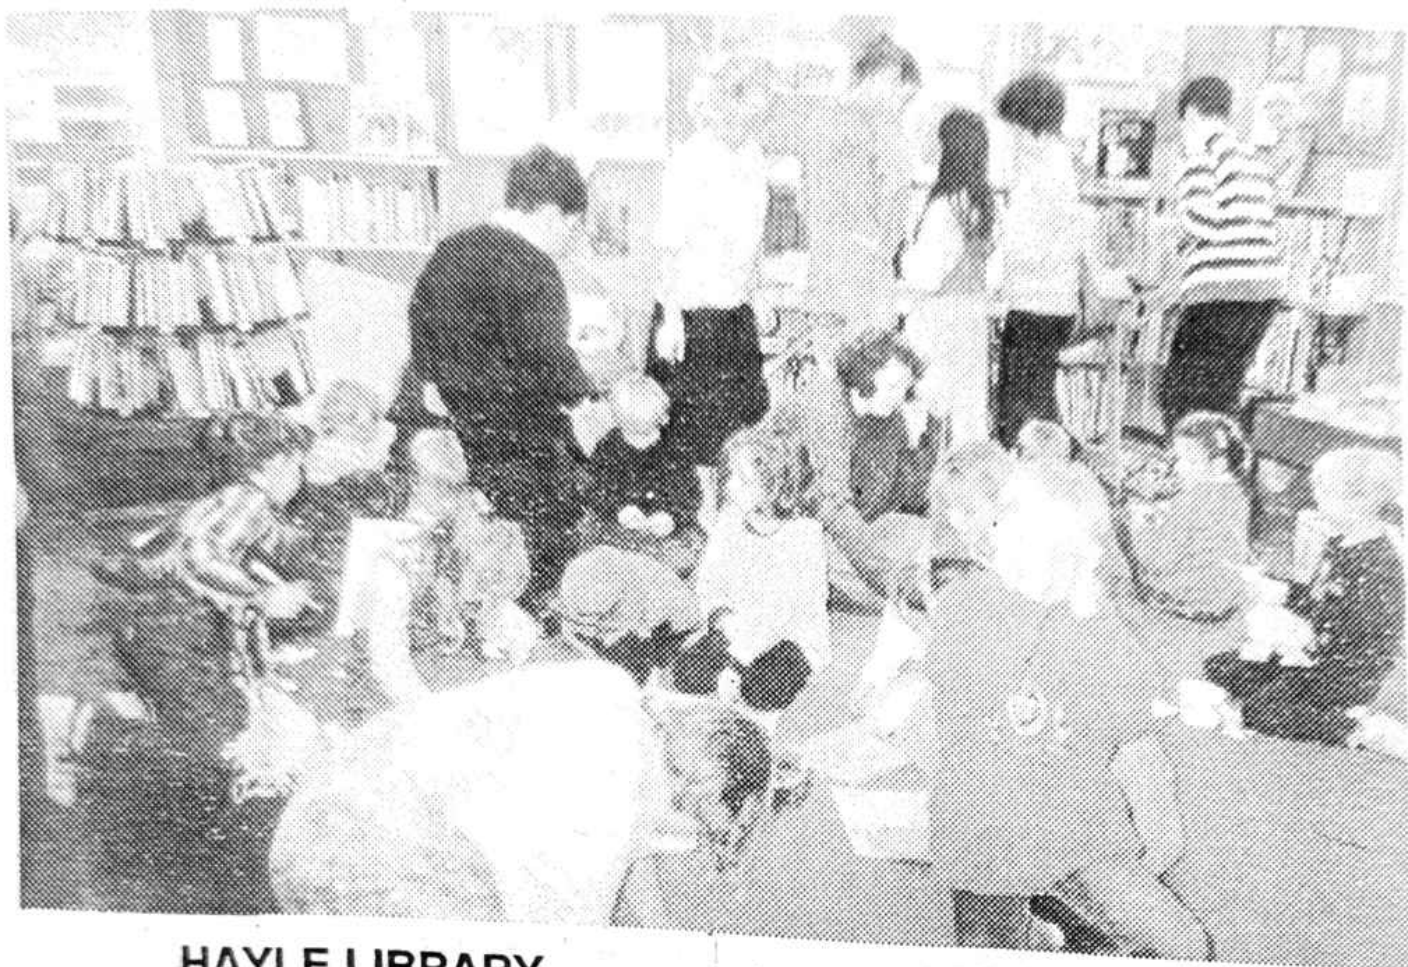

The script has been written by Linda Townend and she and her husband Ken are producing the show which it is hoped, will be enjoyed by all.

A raffle will be drawn during the interval when we also hope to provide tea's and coffee's.

Tickets are priced at £2.00 for adults and £1.50 for children and O.A.P's and can be

HAYLE LIBRARY CHILDREN CHRISTMAS WORKSHOP

It was a full house! All ticket holders only!

Forty children, their Mums and Dads making Christmas Cards, decorations, painting pictures, making father Christmases etc.

One young lad was painting his father Christmas blue, which is all right because the robes of F.C have not always been red.

The pictures etc. were going to be left in the library to be judged at a later date, giving the children who were unable to get tickets for admission to take away pictures etc. to paint and return and to be judged with the others.

Some mothers left their children, but others stayed and helped Val and the other helpers, showing the children what and how to do things.

All the children were quiet and were concentrating on their work.

Joint Annual Christmas Dinner
at Penellen Hotel, Hayle.

A very nice crowd of members and guests gathered at the Penellen Hotel on Thursday,
7th. December for their Annual Dinner. After whetting their appetites with pre-dinner drinks, they sat down to dinner provided by Mr. & Mrs. Beare, the main course seemed to be 50:50 split between turkey and beef but the final result was the same:- it went down the hatch with satisfied smiles all round.

The arrival of a party from Hayle Town Band coincided with the last mouthfuls of mince pies and so they got on with their entertainment of the gathering. The band played a medley of carols both traditional and also popular Merrit tunes. Unfortunately no one had remembered to bring any song sheets, so it was only words for the first verses, and La Las for the rest. Still everybody enjoyed themselves.

Mrs. Jennifer Bennetts, Vice-Chairman of the Flower Club, thanked the members for supporting the function, the guests for their help in staging the Summer Show, Mr. & Mrs. Beare for a wonderful meal and finally the band for rounding off the evening in a spectacular fashion.

LOCAL GIRL MADE GOOD!

What is the connection between Hayle and some of the world's major cities? What is the link between a Cornish girl and the glamorous life-style of the multi-million pound fashion industry? The answer is Florence Nightingale Graham, better known as Elizabeth Arden, the name of one of the world's leading cosmetic manufacturers.

Florence Nightingale Graham was born in Hayle in 1884. She was the daughter of a local chemist, and it wasn't long before she became interested and involved with her father's work.

Mr. Graham encouraged his daughter and she assisted him in the preparation of, amongst other things, make-up for women.

By the end of the nineteenth century Cornwall was heading towards a recession. There was a huge decline in tin mining and, with no other major industries in the locality, prospects were bleak. Like so many others at that time, the Graham family decided to emigrate. They went to Canada, where Mr. Graham took up farming in Ontario.

Florence worked in Canada for a while before getting a job at a beauty salon in New York. She was hard-working and enthusiastic and in America, at that time the great land of opportunity, it was not long before she dreamt of running her own business. Her brother loaned her some money and presently her dream was fulfilled. She opened a shop on Fifth Avenue in New York City. She chose the name Elizabeth Arden from the title of two novels popular at the time.

She was an ambitious, intelligent, dynamic business woman and after her success in New York she came back to England and in 1922 opened a salon in Old Bond Street, London. By 1939 the Elizabeth Arden Limited factory was producing beauty products and cosmetics for sale all around the world. By this time she controlled seventeen companies and subsidiaries and eventually her famous "Red Door Salons" were opened in 33 different countries.

Elizabeth Arden pioneered the theory of colour harmony cosmetics and her products were marketed with flair and style. She became incredibly wealthy and enjoyed a glamorous life-style up until her death in 1966.

She left behind a huge empire and the Elizabeth Arden name today still creates an image of beauty, elegance and sophistication. And yes, Florence Nightingale Graham was definitely a local girl who made good.
